Shows to See This Summer, According to Ocula

July 14, 2025

By Ocula - 14 July 2025, Global

As the northern hemisphere continues on its way through a record-breaking summer, this month brings us an intriguing cast of exhibitions across the continents: reinterpretations of a classic work by Hieronymus Bosch, creative explorations of blindness, first-time shows, and career surveys. Here are 11 of the must-sees among Ocula's member galleries, as picked out by our team.

Berlin's Galeria Plan B is running the second solo exhibition by Romanian-born artist Anca Munteanu Rimnic until 26 July.

Munteanu Rimnic uses bronze and marble sculpture, laser engravings, and digital video to explore the job of the skin as a protective layer against the world and as a separator of bodies. There's a palpable discomfort to the bubbling, skin-like texture of works such as Palermo (2025), an archival pigment print which is just one element of a show very much worth catching.
